

Mateo Hysa

Entry 2

This week and last week we began to get deeper into our technical description writing. I found myself getting back into the groove regarding schoolwork. We uploaded our ideas to blackboard and got feedback from our peers. I have edited my work based on my peers opinions. I like having discussion boards instead of online class because I feel like I'm actually paying more attention to my peers' work which, in turn, helps me make my writing better. Specifically, when writing about the audience and purpose of my technical description object, I was able to understand how general my purpose should have been by reading the responses of my peers.